Dear potential future employer,

I am applying for the position of Front-End Developer, as I am currently studying Front-End Development at Noroff and am deeply motivated to transition into a career in web development. With more than 15 years of professional experience in structured, fast-paced environments in the healthcare sector, combined with a growing technical skillset in modern web technologies, I bring a unique blend of precision, problem-solving and user-focused thinking to front-end development.

Through my studies, I have gained strong competence with HTML, CSS, JavaScript, Git/GitHub, and Figma, and I have completed several practical projects focusing on responsive layouts, accessibility, clean UI structure and reusable code. I am particularly passionate about creating intuitive, user-friendly interfaces and ensuring that digital solutions are both visually appealing and easy to navigate.

My background in healthcare has shaped me into someone who works efficiently under pressure, communicates clearly across disciplines, and handles complex information with accuracy and responsibility. These strengths transfer directly to development work—where structure, quality, collaboration and problem-solving are essential.

I am eager to bring my dedication, curiosity and strong work ethic into a front-end role where I can continue to grow, contribute to meaningful digital solutions and be part of a professional development team. I am motivated, quick to learn, and highly committed to building a long-term career in tech.

Thank you for considering my application. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my background and skills can contribute to your team.

Kind regards,
Christina Anett Osbakk
